QUESTION BOX:

Why do some people cross themselves from left to right while others cross right to left? Which is correct here?

Both forms are correct because the difference is mostly cultural. Left to right is common in Western Christianity, while right to left is more typical of the Eastern Churches. There are several theories as to why this difference took root but no certain explanation.

Another East-West distinction has more symbolic significance. Western Christians typically cross themselves with the hand open and all five fingers extended; this is said to represent the five wounds of Christ on the cross. Eastern Christians put the tips of the thumb and first two fingers together to represent the Holy Trinity and press the other two fingers into the palm representing the two natures of Christ, divine and human.

Dr. Philip Davis.
